Study Guide: If You Give a Cat a Cupcake

Just before mentioned were forces that are not interested in resolution of the conflict in a way acceptable for all protagonists or are interested in it in a sense that they think it is necessary to work against it because they radically confront us with them, friends with enemies, and understand their relations with carriers of other memories in categories of confrontation and try to impose their own stance with force. The ships still shone on the horizon; there was still no breeze.
